PREFATORY NOTE

In order to make known the condition of the state medical library the following rough list of its contents has been prepared. For 78 years medical books have been accumulating, but they form as yet only the nucleus of a medical library, as there has been no money available for any systematic effort to build up such a collection. In 1893 the library of the Albany medical college was transferred to the state, and several large gifts from individual physicians have been received since. The library now contains about 5740 volumes, but, as this list shows, is largely composed of the earlier literature, valuable rather for historical purposes and research than for practical work at the present day.

This list is mainly an abbreviated copy of the subject cards, omitting all references to parts of volumes. Call number, author, brief title, number of volumes if more than one, place and date of publication have been given. Besides these books the library contains many pamphlets, fragmentary sets of periodicals and many unbound catalogues of medical schools. The books which have E or W before the call numbers are in the library of the University examiners and the Woman's library, respectively. These books and also medical dictionaries, bibliographies and similar works are kept as reference books and are not lent.

Appended is an alphabetic list of the medical magazines currently received, and of the new books bought on recommendation of the medical council, which were received too late for insertion in the main list.
